

Olentangy Liberty High School's Arts Festival Showcases This Years Impressive Student Works

Written By Audrey Bowles
 Designed and Edited By Sydney Tatum
 Photographed By Sydney Tatum

Here is a selection of the “Rising Stars” at OLHS selected by the art teachers. This consists of the underclassmen that have impressed staff, and these students show dedication to the arts here at Liberty. “My friends have stuff all over the school that I get to see,” Sophomore Ava Shields says. “I’ve taken a few of the art classes and it’s pretty cool to walk in the art hall.”

This past Sunday May 7th, Olentangy Liberty High school hosted the Arts Festival for all of the students K-12 that will eventually become at Liberty Patriot. Above is art being displayed by the main entrance to the building, showcasing a variety of media created in the multiple classes offered.

Within the Arts Festival, staff had the opportunity to see the future of the Liberty arts programs. While all of the arts teachers played a part in this event, Drawing and Art 1 teacher Nadene Heckleman mentioned her excitement about the younger generation of students. “I love seeing the work from our Elementary students and Middle School students. We are so blessed in our district to have a strong K-12 Arts Program,” Heckleman says. “This arts festival is the only time the community can view the entire art curriculum in our district.”

Pictured is some of the high school work that has been displayed throughout the school year. “I like being able to walk in the halls and see all the bright and colorful art every day,” Freshman Tori Edwardson says. “I never saw Liberty Middle do something like this, and everything looks so good.”

