

Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 3 Does Not Beat the Original

By: Hailey Massie

Guardians of the Galaxy was released on May 5, and let me tell you, it did not disappoint. I would rate this movie an 8/10 because this was the movie in the sequel that had the most details and extra special effects. I wish there was less emotion and a little more humor but I'm impressed with Marvel's comeback from their recent movies. Vin Diesel plays Groot well even though it isn't a big role. Groot is just really funny and adds a cute aspect to the movie. The special effects were really cool and added so much more detail. They also included flashbacks to jog your memory of what has happened in the past. The little flashbacks added emotion and detail.

The producer did a great job of adding emotional parts in a humorous movie. Most of the sensitive emotion came from Rocket's background and origin. I liked that the producer chose to show where Rocket came from because I can't recall the sequel bringing that up in the past. It was really sad to watch the scene where Gamora leaves because Peter is too worried about his friendship with her instead of helping Rocket.

It was one of the darkest, saddest Marvel movies, but the producer, James Gunn, did a great job of adding humor. As always, I love watching Groot because he is a cute, funny character who brightens the mood with his famous "I am Groot" response.

The action fight scene towards the end was very busy and so believable. Finally, seeing the team come together to save Rocket adds a great deal of emotion. It shows how much they truly care about each other and the talent James Dunn has.

This was the third, and believed to be the final, movie of the Guardians of the Galaxy sequel.

Chris Pratt, played as Peter Quill, is the leader of his team as they work together to defend the universe. One night they are attacked by Adam Warlock, the strongest person made by empress Ayesha. During the attack Rocket is seriously hurt, but the team cannot help because if they try to tend to him he will die because of a kill switch. The team's mission is to go find an override code, but at the same time, Rocket's creator is hunting him down because he wants Rocket back. They end up losing Gamora through the process because she is frustrated with Peter obviously trying to reconnect with her when they are trying to save their friend, Rocket.

I have seen both Guardians of the Galaxy movies, and they were really good, so I had high expectations for this movie. Chris Pratt has always been one of my favorite actors from his role of Andy Dwyer in Parks and Rec. This movie doesn't change anything. He did so good at playing the role and is great at showing his range of motions. Chris Pratt has always had a natural sense of humor so it's very enjoyable to watch him in shows and movies.

This movie is 2 1/2 hours long but worth every second. Marvel hasn't been successful with many of their recent movies, so I was unsure of how good this movie would be. But, Marvel did a great job coming back and producing a humorous yet emotional, action movie. I still think the original is better because it was the funniest, but this movie is still great and I would totally recommend.
